THE TASTE OF JEWISH CULTURE

Not Just Apples and Honey: Rosh Hashana Foods and Their Many Meanings

Wednesday, September 6, 7:00 pm EDT (online)

We all know that we “dip the apple in the honey” on Rosh Hashana. But there are so many more symbolic foods that Jews around the world eat on the holiday. What do all of these foods mean? Why is symbolism such a big part of this holiday? How legit are newly-coined symbols at the Rosh Hashana table? And most importantly, what do these traditions say about our people? Please join us as we continue our online exploration of Jewish food traditions and the historical connections between Jews and food with Jewish Food researcher Joel Haber.

All the Honor of the King's Daughter Is Within – Imma Shalom and the Feminine Ideal

Part 2 - Tuesday, August 8, 1:00 pm EDT (online)

Part 3 - Tuesday, August 15, 1:00 pm EDT (online)

Part 4 - Tuesday, August 22, 1:00 pm EDT (online)

Who, according to rabbinic literature, is the perfect woman? Does Imma Shalom, Mother Peace, fulfill this ideal? And what has this to do with the greatest story the Talmud has ever told? Join us for a four-part series exploring the tragedy of Imma Shalom through the Bible, Midrash, and Talmud; Xenophon, St. Paul, and Muhammad; Tennyson, Dickens, and Patmore; Ruskin, Rav Kook, and Betty Freidan.

Gila Fine is a teacher of Aggada at the Pardes Institute of Jewish Studies, exploring the tales of the Talmud through philosophy, literary criticism, psychoanalysis, and pop-culture. She is also a faculty member of the London School of Jewish studies, the Nachshon Project, and Amudim Seminary, and has taught thousands of students at conferences and communities across the Jewish world. Gila's dynamic literary method and unique intertextual approach – ranging from folktales to fiction to film – bring the stories of the Talmud to life, revealing their relevance for our time. Haaretz has called her “a young woman on her way to becoming one of the more outstanding Jewish thinkers of the next generation.”

The Dynamic Interplay Between Religion, State, and National Identity in Israel

Part 2 – Is There Such a Thing as an Israeli? – Thursday, August 10, 1:00 pm EDT (online)

Part 3 – Religion and State in Israel: The End of the Status Quo – Thursday, August 17, 1:00 pm EDT (online)

Part 4 – Jewish Nationalism and the Temple Mount: The End-Point of Zionism – Thursday, August 24, 1:00 pm EDT (online)

Over the past three decades, Israel has experienced significant changes in its religious landscape, with shifts in secular and religious Zionism, as well as challenges faced by the Ultra-Orthodox community. This series will explore the emergence of diverse Jewish voices in Israel today and analyze the impact of these changes on the nation's identity and democratic ideals.

Part 2 – Is There Such a Thing as an Israeli? – Jews always had a complicated relationship with nationality. Within the budding nation states in Europe they struggled for equal rights while suspected of being “a nation within a nation” and founding the state of Israel put the shoe on the other foot: now they had to accommodate a large minority into their democracy. If that's not enough, the very structure of Judaism seems to challenge the simple logic of Liberal Democracy, at least as it plays out in the United States. We shall examine why that is, and try to assess the integrity and equity of modern Jewish nationalism, fluctuating as it does between the modern abstract individual and the specific Jew.

Part 3 – Religion and State in Israel: The End of the Status Quo – Religion and State relations were never simple in Israel, yet over the last three decades they've entered a dramatic overhaul. The famous “Status” agreed between Ben-Gurion and the Ultra-Orthodox in 1947, is today a dead letter, highlighting the growing gap between public opinion in Israel and the formal word of the law. The Chief Rabbinate has lost public legitimacy, and diverse “Judaisms” challenge the traditional divisions in Israeli society. We shall examine the social conditions for these developments, as well as their political ramifications, such as were witnessed in the Israeli October 2019 elections.

Part 4 – Jewish Nationalism and the Temple Mount: The End-Point of Zionism – While historical Secular Zionism wanted little to do with the Temple Mount, and Haredi and Religious Zionism shied away from the site for Halakhic reasons, the last decade witnessed a dramatic change in the attitude of secular and religious Zionism toward the Temple Mount, as for many, including high-ranking Israeli politicians, it now functions as a national symbol of sovereignty, while for fundamentalist Jewish groups it has become the object of messianic yearnings. It's interesting to analyze past and present dispositions, ask why now, and of course to notice the dangers it carries.

Dr. Tomer Persico is a Research Fellow at the Shalom Hartman Institute, a Rubinstein Fellow at Reichman University and a Senior Research Scholar at the UC Berkeley Center for Middle Eastern Studies. Between 2018 and 2021 he was the Koret Visiting Assistant Professor at the UC Berkeley Institute for Jewish Law and Israel Studies. His fields of expertise include contemporary spirituality, Jewish modern identity, Jewish renewal, and forms of secularization and religiosity in Israel. His first book, The Jewish Meditative Tradition (Hebrew) was published by Tel Aviv University Press, and his second book, In God's Image: the Making of the Modern West (Hebrew) was published by Yedioth.
